Renee Osborne posted:

She wasn't just a neighbor; she was the village everyone talks about but few are lucky enough to actually find. Losing someone who saw you through your hardest days and helped raise your daughter is a heavy weight to carry. To the world, she was a neighbor, but to me and Bella, she was family. She was the steady hand and the open heart I needed more times than I can count. Whether it was helping me keep my head above water, providing medicine and care for my daughter, or simply offering a safe place for me to cry and find wisdom, she never hesitated. She was the definition of love in action—someone who didn't just say she cared, but showed it every single day. Her absence leaves a hole in our lives that can't be filled, but her kindness lives on in every lesson she taught me and every memory we share. We love you, and we will miss you forever.
